

Weekly Subject Revision

- Creating a varied approach to Subject Revision can help keep concentration and motivation high.
 - It may be beneficial to begin with a 20/25-minute review of an important topic that you have revised before, (See Previous topic on the Subject Revision Chart below).
 - Start by writing on a blank page what you can recall on the topic (use mind mapping or bullet point method). When finished open the previous revision sheet on the topic, to see if you have left out any important points in the new revision page.
 - Reviewing a topic you have revised before, will help you to mentally 'warm up' and get in the 'mood' for study.
 - ❖ Alternatively, begin by revising an important topic in a subject that you like, for 20/25-minutes.
 - Take a 5-minute break after each 20/25-minute revision session.
 - Revise more challenging material early when you are more alert.
 - It is important to include revision or a review of subject material covered in class each day.
- N.B. Class homework given by subject teachers' may help with the revision of material covered in class each day.

Weekly Subject Revision Timetable

	Monday	Tuesday	Wed.	Thurs.	Friday	Saturday	P.E.E.T ©
Revision Times	Subjects to revise	Subjects to revise	Subjects to revise	Subjects to revise	Subjects to revise	Subjects to revise	Revision Method
							P revious topic
							E xam subjects
							E xam subjects
							T oday's class topics/material
							Sunday
							Subjects to revise

Helpful Hint: After each revision break, complete a quick review of what you revised before the break.